Following his call to the Bar in 2013, Andrew has built up a demanding practice across the education, civil, health and government sectors within the firm. With experience spanning personal injury, professional and clinical negligence through to employment, Andrew's burgeoning practice means that he brings a fresh approach to cases in which he is instructed.

In 2020, Andrew represented a school at a high-profile inquest which involved the tragic death of a young girl who died in the River Irwell in Bury, and he also represented the school during the subsequent judicial review proceedings.

A significant aspect of Andrew's practice is within the regulatory sector. Andrew frequently prosecutes teachers and is routinely instructed in complex multi-day hearings, hearings which involve historic sexual abuse allegations, acutely vulnerable witnesses, and cases involving financial and exam malpractice.

Andrew also has a developing practice of appellate work in the Upper Tribunal. He has recently been involved in two significant appeals:

- Acting for the Respondent in an appeal which concerned the interface between the Equality Act 2010 and Children and Families Act 2014 in SEN appeal hearings (RB v Calderdale MBC (SEN) [2022] UKUT 136 (AAC))
- Acting for the Appellant in an appeal which concerned the application of Schedule 13 EQA 10 to section 20 EQA 10 reasonable adjustments claims (A Multi Academy Trust v RR [2024] UKUT 9 (AAC)).

"Thank you for your support with this. Very much appreciated and a good outcome."

Anonymous,

"For my part, I am entirely happy with these final submissions and wanted to once more thank you both for your sterling work on this matter, although it was not by any measurement a happy experience I certainly never once doubted that I was in highly competent hands. Wonderful news, a great outcome."

Emails from client before and after a decision in a disability discrimination claim.,

"Thank you for all the support you have provided to us. It took a great weight off our minds and has been very much appreciated. Fantastic news. Huge thanks Andrew!"
