

Public Matters - November 2022

18 November 2022

Welcome to our Public Matters Newsletter.

This month we have:

COP27 - what can we expect?

COP27, the global annual climate conference, has kicked off in Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt. We are looking ahead to the conference to see the types of issues that may arise and the key talking points and themes we expect will be addressed over the coming weeks.

Read more >

Hillside — the end of drop in applications?

On 2 November 2022, the Supreme Court handed down its judgment of the case Hillside Parks Ltd v Snowdonia National Park Authority [2022] UKSC 30. This article explores the judgement of this case which now has significant implications for both developers and local planning authorities.

Read more >

Settlement agreements – what are the limitations?

Settlement agreements are commonplace in an employment context. This article explores the issue of alleged discrimination which takes place after entering into a settlement agreement.

Read more >

Dipping in and out of the Investment Zones

This article talks about the recent announcement on 17 November about Investment Zones where there is now a proposal for a smaller number of clustered zones earmarked for investment.

Read more >

Assaults on school staff - how can schools mitigate the risk?

Injuries to teachers and support staff due to assaults by pupils can be serious, and even minor incidents can cause significant disruption. This is something that all school leaders will be made aware of and this article explores the importance of schools ensuring that they comply with their duty of care to mitigate those risks.

Read more >

Author

Zo Hoida
Partner

Zo.Hoida@brownejacobson.com

+44 (0)330 045 2551

Expertise

Sectors

Central government

Government

Local government