

The White and Green Papers are out - what next? webinar

At the end of March, the Department for Education finally published the long-awaited White and Green Papers.

06 May 2022

This online event took place on Wednesday 4 May 2022, 2-3pm and is now available on-demand. The content in this recording was correct as of the original webinar date.

At the end of March, the Department for Education published the long-awaited White and Green Papers.

They have been described as both “ambitious” and “underwhelming” by commentators so far but, whatever your view, they lay out the strategic framework and guidance for all English schools and academies over the next eight years.

During this webinar, Head of Education and Governance expert, Mark Blois was joined by our regulatory and pastoral specialists who explained some of the core policy and legal implications, as well as the importance of action on your own terms.

The White and Green Papers - what happens next?

Watch now On-Demand ▶

brownejacobson.

Speakers

Mark Blois

Partner

mark.blois@brownejacobson.com

+44 (0)115 976 6087

Katie Michelin

Partner

Katie is a highly experienced education lawyer. She advises schools and academies across England on a broad range of education law matters, including governance, admissions, Ofsted inspection, exclusions and parental complaints.

katie.michelon@brownejacobson.com

+44 (0)115 976 6189

Philip Wood

Principal Associate

Philip specialises in education law and has over eight years of experience in advising a range of education institutions

philip.wood@brownejacobson.com

+44 (0)330 045 2274

Contact

Mark Blois

Partner

mark.blois@brownejacobson.com

+44 (0)115 976 6087

Related expertise

Services

Governance of schools and colleges