04 December 2019

Browne Jacobson has begun festive celebrations at its Manchester office with the launch of its '12 Days of Christmas' campaign, to showcase and support the vital work of twelve local charities.

Festivities began with a visit from the Browne Jacobson team to a rehearsal of Special Virtuosi, a music group for children and adults with additional needs based at the Royal Northern College of Music. The team also handed over a £250 donation. The orchestra's next concert is at Didsbury Baptist Church on 5th December at 7.30pm (tickets can be purchased on the door).

The following day, the firm presented another donation to Growing Together, a Levenshulme-based therapeutic horticultural group for refugees and people seeking asylum.

With another ten events planned, including a festive brass band concert, 5k run and food hamper preparation, the campaign will benefit charities such as Mustard Tree, a charity tackling poverty and homelessness, and The Clare Daly Foundation, which raises awareness and supports prevention of skin cancer. Last year, the campaign raised £6,000 for charitable initiatives and projects across Greater Manchester.

The upcoming schedule of events includes:

Amanda Callaghan, partner and head of Manchester, said:

"Making a valuable, positive difference to our regional communities is one of our key purposes here at Browne Jacobson, and following the success of last year's campaign, the Manchester office is delighted to be expanding our support to some new, important local initiatives and projects for 2019 including the excellent Special Virtuosi."

"To support the 12 Days of Christmas campaign, donations can be made through each of the charities direct websites. Your generous donation will aid the vital work of these fantastic organisations that work tirelessly to support people across the region."
