Active in the sector since the 1990s, we are proud of our heritage - supporting housing providers across the country to deliver much-needed affordable housing. We're proud to advise some of the most active housing providers in England, including nearly 20% of Homes England's current "strategic partners".

Using this experience, and our contacts in the sector, we want to help equip you to fulfil your ambitious plans for housing delivery using the land-led approach. From negotiating the heads of terms through to selling plots and mortgaging them, this year-long, case-study based programme will guide you through (and demystify) the legal process of transforming sites into communities.

You will hear from our Property, Construction, Planning and Procurement experts as well as key external leaders in the market, such as leading land agents. Using true-to-life case-studies and insights from sector leaders, this programme will leave you ready to put these learnings into practice in the real world.

Who should join?

This is open to anybody working for a developing registered provider (be that housing associations or local authorities) who is involved in delivering new affordable homes. Whether you are a graduate looking to familiarise yourself with the legal process or an experienced project manager looking for a refresher – this programme is designed for you.

These sessions will be interactive and will provide you with opportunity to connect with your peers in the industry as you learn from and with each other.

What we'll cover

Our social housing experts' training programme delivers the following two-hour sessions:

Session 1: pre-land contract	+
Session 2: the land contract itself	+
Session 3: post-land acquisition	+
