Conor is a data protection and commercial contracts associate in the firm’s commercial law team. Conor specialises in advising clients on regulatory compliance issues related to data privacy, and in drafting, negotiating and advising on various commercial contracts.

Conor trained and qualified as an associate at a top law firm in Ireland before moving to London in December 2023 to join Browne Jacobson.

Conor has significant experience advising tech, media and retail clients on data compliance programs, including advising clients on regulatory investigations, data breaches, privacy notices, international data transfers, transfer risk assessments, cookies compliance, direct marketing, data subject access requests, data protection impact assessments, legitimate interest assessments and artificial intelligence. He also advises clients on other aspects of tech regulation, including in relation to online safety compliance.

Conor also has extensive experience advising clients on agency, franchising, SaaS and outsourcing agreements, particularly in the tech and retail sectors. This also includes advising on consumer law issues related to consumer terms and conditions and advertising.
