

Andrew Douglas

Associate

 London

Andrew.Douglas@brownejacobson.com

+44 (0)330 045 2552

Andrew is an associate in our digital and sourcing team. He has experience advising both private sector and public sector clients across a range of industries on negotiating commercial, sourcing and technology contracts.

Andrew advises on a variety of commercial and technology projects, recent examples include new software roll out, re-procurement of a multimillion-pound telephony contract and on the break-up of a large-scale complex services contract. He regularly advises on large-scale sourcing agreements, SaaS, reseller terms, customer facing terms and key supply chain contracts.

Andrew is a member of the firm's energy and infrastructure core target market group. He has written two LLM master's theses and multiple online and journal articles focusing on legal, policy and regulatory issues facing the energy sector.

During his training, Andrew gained experience in various work streams that are applicable to his work in the digital and sourcing team and was seconded in-house at one of the biggest acute trusts in England.

Expertise

Commercial contracts for retail

Featured experience

EV

Provided legal advice to Oxford City Council on a high-profile electrical vehicle (EV) charging hub.

NHS 111

Advised NHS England on the re-procurement and commercial contract drafting of the national NHS 111 telephone service agreement.

Judicial Review

Acted for the government agency in relation to a Judicial Review claim on the environmental impact of a nuclear power-station.