Jessica is an associate in our planning, environment and public law team and has experience in a broad range of transactional, litigious, and advisory matters, acting for both private and public sector clients.

Having first joined the firm as an administration assistant, soon progressing to the role of claims handler within our business and professional risk team, and later training with Browne Jacobson LLP, Jessica has developed a wide-ranging practice across a number of departments.

Now qualified, Jessica's experience includes preparing legal documents, including orders made under the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984, negotiating planning and highways agreements, advising on complex environmental matters, and handling litigious matters including injunction proceedings and judicial review.

Jessica has presented at our Public Sector Planning Club.
